Did You Know?

Calendula is made from its namesake, the Garden marigold (Calendula officinalis). Calendula’s wound-healing properties are due to the presence of essential oils, saponins, flavonoids and alkaloids. These compounds have been shown to promote healing of the skin.

Keeping the wound or burn moisturized speeds up healing. Always apply a thin layer of the topical product to let the skin breathe.

Calendula topical products are not sunscreens. Always avoid excessive exposure to sun or UV lights, and use sunscreen.

Calendula Cream can be used as a moisturizer for dry, irritated skin.

How to Use
Boiron Calendula

Carefully cleanse and dry the wound before applying Calendula or any other topical product. Do not mix different topicals on the skin, as this could interfere with the active ingredients’ absorption. If pain, swelling, or redness increases, or pus is present, consult with a health care professional.

Consult a doctor for deep puncture wounds, animal bites or serious burns.
